Not illustrated. 1897 Excerpt: .by Italian physicians are among the most interesting we have. Celli, one of the best students of malarial fever, has written a paper of great value on this subject. It is a short article going to prove that water does not transmit malaria. He gives a chart showing that the introduction of a new watersupply into a certain city did not diminish the number of cases of malaria. He says, popular ideas on this matter are fallacious, and notes that persons may live in a malarious place and drink pure water and yet have malaria, while others in the same place drinking foul or paludal water do not have malaria. He himself gave water from the Pontine Marshes, which are acknowledged to be very malarious, in large quantities to a certain number of patients who never had malaria, without its giving birth to this disease in them. Similar evidence is furnished by Salomone Marino: He experimented in the same manner as Celli, giving five to twenty-four litres daily of paludal water for from six to twenty-four days, and did not succeed in a single instance in producing malaria. He says that those cases of malaria which are suspected of having been caused by infection through the digestive tract are usually grave cases with short periods of incubation. He relates two cases which, as the blood was not examined in either case, do not furnish proof of his statement. One patient was very ill and took three weeks...
