Bradlaugh: On the Being of a God as the Maker and Moral Governor of the Universe, Held at the Hall of Science, London, February 1st and 3rd, 1864 The chairman said I have consented to take the chair to-night, both by request of Mr. Cooper and some friends, and with the consent of Mr. Charles Bradlaugh; and I think I shall have your consent also during the discussion which takes place this evening. You well know that the duty and power of a chairman is very limited, being entirely confined to the preservation of order; and unless he has the support of those over whom he presides, his authority is of little avail. I trust, therefore, that you will listen to the arguments that will be addressed to you to-night. There must of course, be great difference of Opinion on every abstract question, otherwise there would be no reason for discussion; so that every lady and gentleman who comes here may be presumed to have formed an opinion beforehand but trusting to your forbearance, have no doubt that we shall be able to get through the business of the evening without any unseemly interruption. I feel it is a very important matter that we have under discussion, respecting not only us who have met to take a part, but humanity in general It is Whether there be a God? And I hope that whatever arguments may be adduced, you will patiently hear the speaker to the end (hear, hear), that a speech shall not be interrupted in the middle of a sentence; that you...
