Orange Frazer Press, United States, 2009. Hardback. Book Condition: New. 257 x 178 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book. Greg Hoard s beguiling new biography following on the heels of the bestselling Joe, Rounding Third and Heading for Home is the story of the most fortunate man alive. Born Billy Purser in Memphis, this most fortunate man had only one job his entire life entertaining. He began with the small audience of his perplexed family, expanded through his schoolyard, the army, and then torched a round of undermanned radio outposts in the Deep South. In time, "the funniest man in America nobody knows about" became Gary Burbank, captivating one of the largest radio audiences in America. "The Mouth That Ate America," he was called. "The town cowlick . . . the guy from college who ate bugs for money." He was begat by Ernie Kovacs and Jonathan Winters, a kind of juiced up, downhome Garrison Keillor, if the place had been called Swamp Woebegone. In truth, he defied description. Until now, that is. For Greg Hoard s novelistic Voices in My Head: The Gary Burbank Story lays out Burbank s beginnings in the blues and honky-tonk culture of mid-century Memphis, moving on to a rousing cast of characters including (but not limited to) Elvis Presley, Luis Aparicio, Whispering Bill Anderson, a monkey named Phyllis Chapman, various musicians and gospel singers, J.R. Ewing, and a crowd of the most happily deranged DJs in radio history. What emerges is a hilarious, fantastical behind-the-scenes picture of a world that has all but disappeared an airwave universe in which Burbank created a cast of characters so vivid and gleefully real, they populated their own deranged country. For nearly a quarter of a century, these characters spilled out of Burbank s imagination (and that of his zany stable of writers) until...
