Not illustrated. 1902 Excerpt: . at once both harmony and reason; so in this same previous representation they simultaneously involve the germ of what we call the feelings. --Psychology, p. 585. And again, p. 590, As the psychical changes become too complicated to be perfectly automatic, they become incipiently sensational. Memory, reason, and feeling take their rise at the same time. 1. Corresponding to absolute external relations, i.e. in the universe around us, there are developed itt the nervous system absolute internal relations, developed before birth, antecedent to, and independent of individual experiences, and that are automatically established along with the very first cognitions. 2. These internal relations, nevertheless, are not independent of experiences in general, but have been established by the accumulated experiences of preceding organisms, handed down by heredity from parent to offspring. 3. Hence the brain represents an infinitude of experiences received during the whole evolution of...
